Welcome to Johannesburg...

South Africa's economic hub, the New York of Africa, bursts at the seams with a wealth of art, history and culture. Johannesburg is a fusion of chic sophistication and rustic, inner-city vibe born of Africa's finest creative minds. Modern African art meets designer trend and the results are striking. From the inner city walking tours' street art and graffiti, to the re-invented university suburbs, the rejuvenation exposes a vibrant urban life. Braamfontein's Constitution Hill, art galleries and restaurants are an example of this regeneration. It is here the continent can express itself and the results are funky, a little off beat and totally captivating.

Upmarket Sandton, Rosebank and Melrose are shopping meccas, with restaurants, and activities easily located beside leafy suburbs. Soweto, once home to South Africa's most well-loved legend, is an essential part of any visit to Johannesburg. Nelson Mandela's house, the Hector Pieterse Museum and Regina Mundi Cathedral are part of the historical appeal of any Soweto visit, and the importance of South Africa's turbulent past and hard won democracy is evident.

Welcome to the Khwai Concession...

The Khwai Concession, formed by the local villagers, is an 18 000 hectare reserve, on the eastern border of the Moremi. A paradise of grasslands, floodplains, lagoons and forests, the focal point of the area is the Khwai River which passes through the region, an extension of the Okavango River. The vital waters form the boundary between the reserve and the Khwai village. Community run, the reserve focuses on conservation, eco-tourism and sustainability, the rewards flowing back to the historical landowners, the Babukakhae people, or San.

Although archaeological evidence exists to show 22 000 years of San presence, the Khwai Villagers remember traditional living in their not so distant past. This respect for the earth and love of the land has resulted in a concession offering superb game viewing, and inhabited by large elephant herds, sable and roan antelope, kudu, tsessebe, wildebeest and zebra. Further up the food chain, lion, hyena and wild dog pay close attention to their prey. Migratory birds delight ornithologists, with Verreaux's Eagle Owl, Senegal Coucals and Long Toed Lapwings making an appearance and brightly coloured birds flit through riverine forests, between towering trees. As this is a private concession, night drives are conducted, affording guests the added benefit of seeing the nocturnal animals which keep a low profile during the daylight hours.

Welcome to Linyanti...

A natural border between Namibia and Botswana, the Linyanti River flows along the fault line, its life-giving presence creating a paradise teeming with wildlife. The area known as Linyanti encompasses the Savute Channel and the Selinda Spillway. A blend of swampy river frontage, papyrus-lined lagoons and towering trees, it extends into grasslands and dry wooded zones. Continuing its meandering journey, the Linyanti River reinvents itself further along, becoming the Chobe River.

As the dry winter months (May to October) leech the water from the land, high numbers of game, particularly elephant and zebra, congregate around the river. Sable, roan, red lechwe and sitatunga are highlights, with the predatory lion, cheetah, leopard and hyena showing a strong presence. The endangered wild dog and bat-eared foxes add to the mix, and it is here that bird-lovers can tick the Narina Trogon off that all important list. Being a private concession, night drives and off-roading are permitted, which ensures a new edge to a safari experience. The world of the nocturnal species opens up, and roads are no longer a restriction: when animals are found it is now an option to follow them off the beaten track.

Welcome to Victoria Falls...

When you wander through the lush rainforests above the Victoria Falls, newly baptised in the mist, your ears holding the echo of thundering waters, it isn't hard to imagine that this is where it all began. Eden.

As the land cuts away beneath the ancient Zambezi River, the waters plummet dramatically into the Batoka Gorge, over 100 metres below. The angrily churned up spray shoots skyward, painting the landscape in billowing clouds. This striking "smoke that thunders" can be seen for miles, a geographic pointer summoning visitors into its presence.

The vibrant town of Victoria Falls is known as the adventure capital of the world, and if your eyes light up at the thought of conquering the "Stairway to Heaven" or "The Terminator" in a raft, then this is the place for you. While the notorious Nyaminyami (Zambezi River God) watches from its mythical depths, and the majestic basalt cliffs allow your passage through the canyon's exquisite landscape, adventure seekers are assured of a good time. From Grade 5 white-water rafting, bungee jumping and abseiling the amusement never ends.

What makes this destination so memorable is the fact that it is perfectly combined with warmly hospitable people, exquisite scenery and an array of accommodation. Excellent game, historic ruins, fishing and luxury train travel are easily accessible from Victoria Falls, as are the neighbouring countries which border this fascinating town.

Welcome to Hwange National Park...

Royal hunting grounds in the 19th century and declared a national park in 1929, today, Hwange is Zimbabwe's largest game reserve. Vast stretches of wilderness, extend from horizon to horizon and form part of the ancient migration route towards Northern Botswana's Chobe and the Linyanti.

This diverse landscape of mopane and teak forests, semi-desert scrubland and granite hills is inhabited by a wide variety of mammals and birds. Although a year round destination, Hwange is particularly appealing during the winter months (April to October) when large concentrations of animals flock to artificially pumped waterholes as the seasonal pans dry out. The park's network of waterholes sustains life when natural resources are unavailable. Massive herds of elephant make their presence felt during the dry period. Buffalo, zebra, sable and roan antelope, as well as lion, leopard, cheetah and wild dog may be seen.

Cool mornings warm up to comfortable sunny days, and chilly night drives reveal the exciting nocturnal species which make Hwange home. Between November and February/March summer thunderstorms blanket the earth with life, filling up the waterholes and dispersing the animals throughout the park. Game can be located on the open southern plains during summer, but the scenic north is a renewed landscape of hills, floating lily-pads and full pans. Brightly coloured birds dot the trees, bringing movement to endless skies.

Welcome to Lake Kariba...

Lake Kariba's waters capture the reflection of iconic painted skies, the blazing sunset colours echoing across waters. Nature's unrestrained palette balances water and sky. In many places Kariba's vastness gives the impression of endless oceans, while closer to shore, tree stumps pierce through the lake surface, graveyard evidence of land claimed by water. One of the four largest man-made lakes in the world, Kariba stretches 220kms by 40 kms wide, positioned on Zimbabwe's northern border with Zambia. Covering approximately 5500km<sup>2</sup> of what was once the Zambezi valley, the lake is studded with islands and flanked by the rugged Matuzviadonha Mountains. The dam's genesis provides an almost biblical history of vengeful gods, displaced people and epic relocation plans.

Lake Kariba was created in the late 1950's by damming the Zambezi River and flooding the land behind the dam. Before the project could begin, 57,000 Batonga people and their villages had to be relocated causing much unhappiness and resentment. Today there are still Tonga people who believe the river god, Nyaminyami, was responsible for the death of 86 workers who perished whilst building Kariba dam. At the same time, Operation Noah, a massive wildlife rescue project was launched in a bid to relocate the animals affected by the rising waters. The five year long programme caught the attention of the world as over 6000 animals were moved to safety.
